The tour is the first time that the 57-year-old American has journeyed to the Islamic Republic since 2004, when she spent three months in the country as a guest of the Iranian government. "I have never been to Israel, I have never been to Saudi Arabia," Geller said. "I have never been to Iran, and I've never been to Saudi Arabia. So it is exciting to me." In 2004, the Iranian government invited Geller, along with friend and fellow activist Robert Spencer, to the country in order to discuss the strained relationship between the government and the Bahá'í faith, which is seen by some in the country as a religion sponsored by foreign powers. Since then, Geller has travelled to the Islamic Republic three times, though not through the official channels of the Ministry of Culture and Islamic Guidance. In the face of a worldwide embargo, Geller's trip will be restricted to the capitals of Tehran and Shiraz, including one day at the former. Q: HTTPS on a dynamic site with SSL (subscribe.domain.com -> ssl.domain.com) I have a dynamic site (using wordpress) that is handling its own SSL certificate. The problem is that we will be offering services to customers (say, for example: Customer 1 has 100GB of data on our server and 50GB of data on their own, so they want 100GB+50GB-50GB=$150GB). The way I'm looking to implement this is by just adding a link to subscribe.example.com (where example.com is the name of the site, not the domain). Somewhere on the left side of the site, it lists a section saying: Connect to {service}.example.com And then somewhere on the right side of the site, it lists a section saying: Connect to {customer}.example.com When a customer goes to or I can then add /customer to the URL so that my entire site submits the SSL certificate for the customer's data. My questions is: Is this the best way to handle this? What problems/issues can arise from this? A: You could use the wildcard certificate method, that would require a mapping between the domain and it's certificate. There is a good explanation in this answer to a similar question: How to make HTTPS work with a wildcard certificate? That approach would have to work reliably, you should look into 0cc13bf012
