Reviewing the denial of a motion to suppress for clear error, we affirm. See United States v. Carbajal, 290 F.3d 277, 287 (5th Cir. 2002). The Fourth Amendment proscribes the warrantless entry of a person's home to execute a search warrant unless it is one of several specific exceptions. See United States v. Martinez, 169 F.3d 217, 221 (5th Cir. 1999). Here, the officers had a valid search warrant and were authorized to execute the search at any time between 6:00 a.m. and 8:00 a.m. Importantly, the district court found that Agent Walton and Deputy Sheriff Brown were authorized to enter the trailer exceptionally and absent exigent circumstances. It further found that Deputy Sheriff Brown gained entry by knocking on the door. The government does not challenge these findings of fact, but argues that the entry was nevertheless valid because Agent Walton had to establish probable cause that the ammunition was present in the trailer at the time of entry and then present this probable cause to a magistrate judge. However, we need not decide that issue because the district court also found that the officers entered through a common passway to the trailer. The common passway, which was admitted into evidence, was found outside of the tra
