“The Sun never shone, the Moon always felt empty, How can you sink so far away” – A line in song written by a silent character who has nothing to say

Geo-Duck: At your first sight, Geo-Duck looks like a typical Day & Night anomaly. But this is not a silly, Earth bound game. It is a game of epic proportions, a game where you will find yourself, your sense of awe and exploration, and the game’s mysterious, zen-like sensation constantly confronts you. It’s a game where you chase the eclipse. The player of this game will touch the world and dive deeply within the world, and it’s up to you to follow the rhythm. It’s a game where you go on a journey with a mysterious girl, and follow her footsteps through the world. The journey is about a girl who’s running away from sadness, sadness that won’t go away no matter how hard she tries. A girl who’s running away from the world, Because she feels that people in this world deserve to live. The two of them (a boy and a girl) are saving and raising their heart as a secret. And those two hearts have a strange legend. The boy can see a girl with a broken heart. But he’s not able to help her, because the girl’s situation is too heavy to carry. He sees the life that he himself can’t live, And he tries to put it down. The girl, on the other hand, The girl is an anomaly. She feels that everything is not right with the world, the people in this world deserve to live. Her heart is more powerful than anyone's... She finds the reason she's running. And she runs away from that reason, Even if she loses her friends. "The Sun never shone, the Moon always felt empty, How can you sink so far away" How is a secret? This game tells you that even if you try to keep something secret, Even if you try to hide, it will be found. Even if you keep your whole heart as a secret, There'll be someone who will find that heart... It's like a real life

Codi Wilson, CP24.com The TTC says fare inspectors will be riding trains and streetcars to ensure riders aren't cheating the system. In the wake of a fare evasion incident at Bloor-Yonge Station, TTC spokesperson Stuart Green told CP24 on Monday that the transit commission decided to issue orders to workers to be on the look-out for fare evaders on board the vehicles. Since 2011, the TTC has deployed more than four dozen fare inspectors on streetcars and buses. They issue the standard fare, which is valid for a single ride in the city, even if it is to a location outside the TTC's network. In the past several months, transit commission staff say that they have seen fare evasion rates on streetcars at nearly 12 per cent.

“Our data shows that the customer experience is very poor,” Green told CP24 on Monday. “One, it slows down the transit system. There are a lot of customers who want to use streetcars and enjoy them, but if they have to wait 15 minutes just to get on, they will not use it.” The TTC has been deploying fare inspectors on streetcars and buses for several years, but as the price of a
