Nunavut is a place of astounding beauty, but it's what happens when too many different species start living together that creates some of the world's most awe-inspiring wildlife scenes. In the world's most northerly, and arguably most remote, community, the northern caribou herds can be seen in their thousands, pulling up their dusty icefields to breed in the summer. Over the last few months, the Nunavut Wildlife Management Board has received almost 500 applications from over 1,000 applicants for limited permits to cull caribou to control ticks and prevent the spread of chronic wasting disease. The board is expected to review all 1,000-plus applications next month, and at the end of the year, decide which of them will be offered licences to cull in the 2017 summer. The board is hoping to kill more than 3,000 caribou. They are being offered 30 licences for a season of culling. The board says previous culls have shaved off more than half the population of the animals since 1998. It estimates the population is now down to about 50,000 caribou, compared to an estimated 80,000 in the mid-1990s. "We don't want to have a cull this year," chairperson Gordon Beaven said. "What we're hoping is that we'll get a slight increase in population, one that will be positive, and a population that's sustainable." Beaven says the next caribou season will start this spring, if the wildlife board grants the required permits. "I believe we are in a good situation right now, and we don e79caf774b

The company's roots can be traced back to 1933, when the iconic Scirocco sport-compact was created. In the decades following, the Transformer range grew, providing families with the choice of the stylish Fiats for everyday motoring, the three-wheeled Twingo's, the Ulysse Nardin range of luxury four-wheeled cars as well as the Fiat Panda and Fiat Punto. These days, though, the Italian car company is more focused on performance cars, although that's not to say it's neglected its small family car segment. Indeed, it is the right-hand-drive Fiats of the Letise and of the Polo, combined with the much-improved Fiat 500, that have enjoyed the greatest success with the British market. But the Transformer brand has again returned to the fore with the new brand badge-engineered Fiat 500X, which has been launched in the UK, replacing the Fiat 500 and its marquee sister, the Fiat Ducato. With an eye to the crossover market, the new 500X is smaller than the 500. It's also more affordable, though, costing from around £11,500, as opposed to the price of the 500 from £12,
