Invasive aspergillosis is a life-threatening disease in immunocompromised patients. We prospectively evaluated the usefulness of serum and bronchoalveolar lavage galactomannan assays as a diagnostic tool in 30 episodes of invasive aspergillosis in children. The probability of diagnosing invasive aspergillosis increased as the serum galactomannan concentration increased. A cut-off of 0.5 ng/mL of serum galactomannan was useful in discriminating between invasive aspergillosis and colonization (sensitivity 92%, specificity 100%, positive predictive value 100%, negative predictive value 84.6%). Both serum and bronchoalveolar lavage galactomannan assays were helpful in differentiating invasive aspergillosis from colonization. The sensitivity of serum galactomannan assays was high in children with hematological malignancies, whereas in children with immunodeficiency other than hematological malignancy, the sensitivity was lower. Q: SQL Data Type Converters and conversions to/from Sorted Set Today I experienced a weird issue I never met before. I have a SQL table that have many columns, one of them is TYPE. Table contain following data TYPE [int] [varchar] [DATETIME] [decimal] ... Now, some of the data is not a number and are not able to be treated as number. For example, a date can not be a number. Unfortunately, when I need to return a number for a column, the system take the value of the first string that is alphabetical with decimal. For example: 123.456. -> 0 123-456. -> 0 123.456+ -> 1 123-456+ -> 1 Also consider this case 123. -> 0 123- -> 0
