an oiled baking sheet in the oven. On a floured surface, roll one ball into a circle that's approximately 16 inches (40cm) in diameter. Place the rolled out dough in the middle of the hot baking sheet. Reduce the oven's temperature to 350°F (180°C). Using a sharp knife, cut diagonal slashes (four total) into the surface of the dough. Bake for 40 to 50 minutes, until golden brown around the edges and very puffy in the center. Transfer the pizza to a cooling rack and let cool. Repeat the process with the rest of the dough balls, returning the baking sheet to the oven. As soon as the pizzas are cooled slightly, layer the toppings as follows: * Divide the ricotta cheese among the pizzas and top each with 3 to 4 tiny mint leaves, minced. * Top half of each pizza with the black olives and shaved tomatoes. * Sprinkle on ½ teaspoon of the oregano. Add a quarter of the mozzarella and then top each pizza with a pinch of the parmesan. * Top half of each pizza with a handful of the baby spinach. It's the appetizer mushroom, be it sashimi, as an appetizer on its own at a restaurant presentation, or eaten hungover and naked in bed. Depending on how much time we have, we often roast and smoke certain mushrooms and then add them to a pasta or noodle dish as more of a texture and flavor modification as opposed to giving them a final cooking and even more flavors. These green algots are a one-bite appetizer that involves popping the finished mushrooms in your mouth really fast! I can't think of a better choice than using the enokis here. If you can't find enoki mushrooms at your local market, use any mushroom you like: chanterelles, portobello, my favorite, shimeji, or even a pretty decently sized white fungus (like the ones we sell in

The founder of a new Portland, Ore., brewery on Wednesday suggested that he will likely name the state where his company is based after the state he abhors. Ross Welty, owner of Axis Brewing Co., told ABC's "Good Morning America" that his new brewery will have a name that reflects "the state that I feel has prevented me from growing and continuing to make great beer." "Axis" isn't his real name, Welty said, but it describes "the background of our company." Welty said he decided not to name his brewery after his hometown of Alaska because he doesn't like the state. He said he may name the brewery after Oregon instead, but said that would likely mean using "the state's name as a nickname." "And I don't know that I would do that," Welty said. The state's lawmakers decided to honor 40th President Franklin D. Roosevelt by renaming the state House and Senate after him. A number of businesses have taken advantage of the name change, including a series of websites offering merchandise that includes "FDR" and "FDR" shirts.
