What's new in Elden Ring:

AppSpy takes a look at AG Drive in their latest video review. Giving it top marks and only dinging it for not having different weather effects sooner than they should have. If you like 'Gran Turismo' you will love AG Drive! AppSpy's review of AG Drive: There are plenty of car games out there that try to channel the Gran Turismo formula, but AG Drive is the first to really get it right. It might look like a simple racer with a typical ragdoll physics, but it is actually a lot more. The names might be similar or even the graphics to Gran Turismo, but this is still a racing game with city events that you can participate in, which makes it stand out from the crowd. The campaign mode has seven stages of increasing difficulty along with plenty of events and car modifications to use, of course, after the race is over. Then there's the battle mode, with up to 32 players joining the race in huge tracks that can be customized before the match. While it might be a bummer for those who prefer single player, you can't compare it to Gran Turismo Online. You can also win prizes by using track, weather, and time improvements to get as many points as possible when competing. So you'll need to be prepared if you want to win. After all, this is Gran Turismo in a sandbox! Want If you're a Gran Turismo fan, then it should come as no surprise that you're going to like AG Drive. There isn't a lot to complain about here. I have a confession to make. I would have liked AG Drive much better had it been released for the iOS platform. That would have made this one of my greatest game experiences of 2016. It's really hard to understand how any developer, much less Akihiro Yoshida with his almost minimalist style of development, could have managed to turn out what looks like every bit of extra effort, every piece of polish, and every little improvement at such a remarkable level of quality on the new Android platform. And there's really little negative to report about either the Android or iOS version of AG Drive, except that the iOS version definitely has a lot more track (I couldn't tell if it was actually more than seven) and also has a much better selection of cars,
