Related Stories The UK Government is refusing to grant amnesty to those who smuggled weapons and ammunition into the country. Instead, the Home Secretary has ordered an investigation into the distribution of illegal weapons and ammunition. The "epidemic" of illegal weapons and ammunition, says the Home Secretary, Jacqui Smith, is an "appalling and barbaric" phenomenon which "takes us ever closer to the definition of civil war". The Government will not announce new measures until investigations are completed, but says it will look at the longer-term future of the Armed Forces. Mr Blair has also asked the Prime Minister to consider options for addressing the problem. In a speech to the House of Commons, Ms Smith says that she is not in favour of "changing the law to change the law" but that she is in favour of "changing the laws to change the way things are done". She says the current legal penalties are "too serious" but that she has also made clear that the Home Secretary must have the powers and resources to deal with the problem. Those sentenced to prison are being allowed to apply for early release if they "complete certain non-violent tasks with a minimum 10% success rate". 'Do we do nothing?' Ms Smith says the Government will have to decide when it is c6a93da74d
