Patch Sap 2000 Ver 7.42 Windows 64 Bitl

hacking sql server procedures part 11: enumerating sql server logins : deals with enumerating sql server logins, that is done with the suser_sname function and a modification of the roles.txt file. corresponding module is microsoft sql server suser_sname windows domain account enumeration hacking sql server procedures part 12: sql server login security : deals with sql server login security. most of the material is not new. but the module includes some important new information. specifically, the sql server login security is determined by using the new suser_sname windows functions. corresponding module is microsoft sql server suser_sname windows domain account enumeration when you're running windows server 2008 r2 (or server 2008) and you upgrade your sap systems, you will be running the non-mainstream stack build pl 1400. it's a good idea to be careful about this stack build, because it doesn't have the same level of support as the build used in prior releases, and can therefore be problematic in some situations. there are some things you can do to mitigate the potential problems, for example if you upgrade a database instance to a supported release that uses the stack build pl 1400, you can upgrade the server os to windows server 2008 r2 and then upgrade the database instance to a supported release. if you upgrade the database instance to a supported release using the stack build pl 1400, it will be an unsupported instance. to minimize the chance of this situation, it is best to try to always use the stack builds that are released with each release of the sap system. in this case, the current stack build that is included in the release should match the database instance. this stack build is pl 1400 for windows server 2008 r2. 5ec8ef588b
