There are also other small, but growing, creative apps, such as Snapseed, Pixlr, and PicsArt, which just about cover the needs of mobile designers and photographers, and features such as MailChimp, which is integrated with yet another of Adobe's big apps, InDesign. Photoshop is obviously in a league of its own, and it's not close to ending its dominance. The additions to Photoshop in 2020 are just the beginning though, as the company is planning to shake things up quite a bit in 2021. Features like selectable colour palettes, brushes, spot healing, zoom lens corrections, special filters for text, artificial intelligence, and more are sure to make their way into the program. There's also the promised feature of a dark mode, and a returning built-in screenshot tool. It looks like it's going to be a great year for Photoshop.
