These prior art composites are quite distinct from the present invention in that the bonding agent in the present invention does not form a rigid skin and no filling is performed.

Q: How to check if a file with a certain name exists in a given directory? I have a list of images, and I want to see if a given image exists in a directory. From what I can tell, this is not possible with the built in `os.path.exists()` function, which only checks if a path exists within the filesystem. Is there a more efficient way to do this with the `os` or `shutil` modules? A: One way is to use `shutil.copyfile` and a `glob`.

from glob import glob
import shutil
shutil.copyfile("images/*.png", "images/done/") filepath = os.path.join("images/done/", "example.png") if os.path.exists(filepath):
    print "Path does exist"
else:
    print "Path does not exist"

A: This works for me: `import os` `import glob` `for file`
