Q: Calculate and store tabular data I have a basic requirement to store tabular data. This basically contains two columns. The first column needs to store a number of records, each of which could be unique, but already contains data from both columns. The second column needs to hold unique records, but is already populated. I was thinking of using a 2nd table to hold this and using a simple ON DUPLICATE KEY UPDATE to populate the 1st table. I'm wondering if this would work or not. Thanks for your help.

A: This will work for you

```
CREATE TABLE T1 ( `col1` VARCHAR(30) , `col2` VARCHAR(30) ,PRIMARY KEY(`col1`,`col2`)) ;
Now Insert
INSERT INTO T1(`col1`,`col2`) VALUES ('p1','p2'),('p1','p2'),('p1','p2'),('p1','p2'),('p1','p3') ;
Now UPDATE
UPDATE T1 SET col2 ='p3' WHERE col1='p1';
Check the output of this table
SELECT * FROM T1;
You will get
col1 col2 ----- p1 p2 p1 p3 p1 p2
This UPDATE takes only one value from the set of the col1 column and replaces the matching value for that col1 value. So here we can see the col2 value is updated to p3 as where the match is found. Now for unique values and run the same query again.
ALTER TABLE T1 ADD UNIQUE INDEX (col1);
UPDATE T1 SET col2 04aeff104c
