Adobe has listened to user input and made reading a bit more bearable by creating the Lightroom Mobile app. It's a similar experience to reading with Lightroom on a PC or Mac, but there are some quirks. The interface is more streamlined, and the Markups panel allows you to create notes that never leave the Book itself. But it's so much less intuitive. While the example is in the context of an image, it speaks to me. And, yes, I do sometimes pass over plugins and resources for free when I could easily sell them in a more impersonal marketplace.
